

Neurons communicate via synaptic transmission. This process involves the release of neurotransmitters into the synaptic cleft, which bind to receptors on the postsynaptic neuron. This causes an electrical signal to be transmitted down the receiving neuron.